REMS Tools for Pipework

As part of The Hireman's plans to expand the pipe working equipment range on our hire fleet, our Sales Manager Phil Williams and the team have met with REMS' Ray Tizzard for a demonstration of some of the products they offer.

REMS is a major manufacturer of pipe working tools and machines across Europe and is backed by over 100 years of experience in the area.

Ray showed us a range of hand-held pressing machines which allow for joining without soldering or the need for heat, they don't require a Hot Works Permit and so won't affect the fire alarms or generate the risks associated with conventional soldering. Pipe layouts can be planned and set up before being joined, streamlining the whole process. The machines are battery powered, making them portable and convenient to use. They are universally compatible with the vast majority of fittings a customer may require.

Phil Williams said: "We're looking forward to working with REMS and adding to our pipe working equipment. The Hireman is always looking to expand our fleet and provide more options to our customers and this is just one of the areas we're focusing on."
